

ALPS Gaining consent from a service user or carer Sept10

Student guidelines

The purpose of this assessment is to enable you to think about how you gain consent from service users and carers. You are asked to consider how you gained consent (self assessment) and seek feedback from a service user or their carer, a peer/student colleague and another qualified professional. This assessment tool is to enable you to understand your communication, team working and ethical practice skills.

Service user assessment

You are obliged to consider the service user's perspective as this is good professional practice.

It is desirable and powerful to get feedback from service users and carers during your placement. However this will always be a voluntary process.

Always discuss with your practice assessor before approaching a service user for feedback to ensure service user needs have been taken into account.

Reflection/Action plan

As a result of feedback and reflection on this activity, what do you now plan to do in order to increase your competence and confidence in this area? Don't forget to add timescales to your action planning.

This action plan should be developed with your designated practice assessor.

>If you were unable to obtain feedback from any sources please explain why?

>Looking at your reflections and feedback from other sources what were your strengths during this process of obtaining consent from a service user?

>Looking at your reflections and feedback from other sources what were your areas for development during this process of obtaining consent from a service user?

>What actions are you going to take to improve your practice in this area? Include timescales

>How will you use this assessment as evidence? (E.g. placement assessment/portfolio, PDP etc)

>I have agreed this plan with my practice assessor
